

He taught me how to do that

Louis Lopez. He was one of my first guys. Louis was an excellent, excellent cow person. Louis, when I, he could give IV bottles like better than a veterinarian or as good. And he taught me, even though I did that in college, had a professor teach me. No, no. Not nearly as good as Louis teaching me. Louis had, he showed me, you know, how you take warm water, put on a cow's neck, and you rub that down there if you can't find that vein right off. And he showed me how, what fingers you exactly use that works the best to pinch the vein off and hit veins. And my father who'd done the IVs here for 20 something years, he still to this day can't give a bottle as good as I can on certain cows, from Louis teaching me.
