“When I worked for the Hilton Hotel. It’s very funny... [laughs] So there was this chief engineer. So he, I think I was in the ballroom alone and I was stacking chairs and throwing the tables here and there. And at the same time, I was all the time singing.

But if you see somebody else alone having to do that whole big ballroom by yourself, the expressions are different, the energy is different. So he really got surprised and he offered me the job of an engineer. I think that's the only reason why. Like, I have a joy and I don't see the difficulties in doing things in life. And I think it's a gift. It's a part of being Tibetan. And that's a beautiful shape you do not want to lose. Yeah.”
